

The screenshot shows the BMJ website homepage with several callouts:

- 1: Current issue section, featuring a thumbnail for 'The holy grail of blood tests?' and a list of articles including 'Caring for dying patients in the community' and 'The potential burden of overinvestigation'.
- 2: Latest articles section, categorized into News, Research, Comment, and Education.
- 3: Search bar and navigation links (Archive, For authors, Hosted, Search).
- 4: Main header navigation (Home, covid-19, Research, Education, News & Views, Campaigns, Jobs).
- 5: Main article: 'Galleri promises to detect multiple cancers—but new evidence casts doubt on this much hyped blood test'.
- 6: Right-hand sidebar with a list of featured articles and news items.
- 7-10: 'Most read' section at the bottom, listing top articles such as 'Intake of sugar sweetened beverages among children and adolescents'.
